Purpose:

The Conference is intended to enhance networking and partnerships amongst social science researchers, policy makers and practitioners (coroners, medical examiners, police, crown attorneys, child protection and anti-violence community agencies) in their review of domestic homicides across Canadian provinces and territories. The conference proceedings will focus on risk factors and systemic gaps in policies, training and resources that are related to domestic homicides. The ultimate goal of this work is to prevent domestic violence and save lives lost to these tragedies.

Welcoming Remarks

Peter Jaffe, Academic Director of the Centre for Research and Education on Violence against Women & Children, University of Western Ontario

Greetings from The Honourable Deb Matthews, Minister of Children and Youth Services and Minister Responsible for Women's Issues

Keynote Address: An International Perspective on Domestic Homicide Reviews: From a Culture of Blame to Understanding & Prevention

The past 30 years have been a period of significant transformation in social, legal, and public policy responses to domestic violence. The United States has witnessed a rapid growth in domestic violence death review committees that now exist in most states as a way of developing government and community strategies to prevent these tragedies. Dr. Websdale will discuss the development of the US DV fatality review committees and emerging issues in the movement. He will emphasize the importance of a culture of understanding rather than blame in these initiatives. Dr. Dawson will discuss what has changed in Canada as a result of increased public and professional attention targeting domestic homicide. She will highlight key issues including, legislative and public policy initiatives, changes in the characteristics of intimate partner homicide, a changing criminal justice response to these crimes and the increasing interdependency between criminal justice and community resources to respond more effectively to this violence

Risk Assessment, Safety Planning & Risk Management: From Theory to Practice

Risk assessment is a relatively new science that is used to measure the level of danger posed by a perpetrator of domestic violence on a victim. The results of a risk assessment can highly influence responses from police, courts, and other frontline workers that support the victim and manage the offender. When faced with a high risk case, effective risk management and safety planning is essential. This morning plenary will discuss the role of the police in conducting risk assessment, safety planning, and risk management with victims and perpetrators of domestic violence and how their role is received by the judicial system.

Use of the Danger Assessment in Shelters: Real World Quantitative and Qualitative Data

Both emergency shelter and transitional housing programs across the province of Alberta have been using the Danger Assessment with all residents as a basis for self assessment of level of danger and as a basis for safety planning. This workshop will present the qualitative (from residents, advocates and community stakeholders) and quantitative findings from an evaluation of the DA implementation as well as observations about the challenges of this kind of evidence based program implementation. Basic training on the Danger Assessment will also be provided for certification.

Salon CThe Role of The Health Care System in Preventing Femicide

Much has been written in recent years regarding the role of health professionals in the prevention and treatment of women who have experienced intimate partner violence (IPV). At the same time, various initiatives have been recommended to assist health professionals in the identification of women at risk. The extent to which these initiatives have been embraced within health care settings has been sporadic and inconsistent at best. Health professionals have identified numerous barriers to the adoption and implementation of these recommendations. In this presentation, we critically examine the role of health care professionals and the health care system in the prevention of IPV and femicide.

Presenters

Helene Berman, Associate Professor, School of Nursing, and Chair, Centre for Research & Education on Violence Against Women and Children, The University of Western Ontario, London, ON

Robin Mason, Dalla Lana School of Public Health, University of Toronto, Toronto, ON

Salon AThe Development of Ontario Provincial Police Strategies in Threat Assessment for Domestic Violence Cases

This workshop will provide an overview of the Threat Assessment Unit of the Ontario Provincial Police. Specifically, this presentation will discuss the process for requesting Threat Assessment Unit services, how the Unit categorizes risk, and the particular threat assessment tools that are utilized when determining risk in domestic violence investigations.

Presenters

Debra Heaton, Detective Sergeant, Ontario Provincial Police,

Glenn Shiel, Detective Sergeant, Ontario Provincial Police

Salon BUnderstanding How DV Death Reviews Work in Communities: From Theory to Practice

Domestic violence fatality reviews entail the identification of deaths traceable to domestic violence, the examination of systemic interventions in those cases, and the promotion of social change to reduce both domestic violence and domestic violence homicides. This presentation will address the concept of domestic violence fatality reviews, the research on domestic violence related deaths, the setting up of review teams, and the broader implications for prevention. Dr. Websdale will bring a practical perspective with some examples of challenges that communities face in dealing with these tragedies.

Presenter

Neil Websdale, Professor of Criminal Justice, Northern Arizona University, Tucson, AZ

Preventing Domestic Homicide: The Role of Risk Assessment and Management

Risk assessment and management are an essential part of practice in the criminal justice, healthcare, and public welfare systems. But can risk assessment and management help prevent domestic homicide? This session will describe the Structured Professional Judgment approach (SPJ), a research-based model of risk assessment, and how it can be used by agencies with diverse roles and responsibilities to develop, organize, and improve their delivery of services to enhance the safety of potential victims of domestic homicide.

Presenter

Stephen Hart, Department of Psychology, Simon Fraser University, Vancouver, BC

Mobilizing Government and Community Through Legal Strategy and Evidence Based Research — A Case Study Based on the Lee Inquest in BC

This workshop is a panel presentation by those involved in creating BC's Keeping Women Safe Report, some of whom were also involved in the 2008 Lee Inquest into the death of five people. The Report was co-authored by a team that included community advocates, lawyers and government personnel. It outlined eight critical components for an effective criminal justice response to domestic violence and formed the basis of evidence led by the Ending Violence Association of BC, who had "participant" standing at the Inquest. The recommendations of the Report and Inquest process will be used as a case study to explore strategies for initiating change and in identifying continuing barriers to action around domestic violence and homicide.

Presenters

Diane Turner, Kelliher and Turner, Victoria, BC

Gisela Ruebsaat, Community Coordination, Women's Safety Program (CCWS), Vancouver, BC

Tracy Porteous, Executive Director of the Ending Violence Association, Vancouver, BC

Domestic Homicides in the Context of Family Separation

(Presentation in French with English & French Powerpoint Slides)

This presentation looks at the increased risk of domestic homicide during the period of family separation and in the months that follow. The fact that the majority of these homicides are planned and often involve a weapon will be discussed. Additionally, this presentation will focus on the challenges that accompany the risks for partner homicide in the context of family separation, such as child custody and access.

Presenter

Myriam Dubé, Université de Montréal, PQ

Salon ETargeting Shelters: Establishing a Preventative Intervention Guide for Partner Homicide

This session will focus on research and practice innovations in Quebec designed to prevent domestic homicide. Community agencies were provided with an intervention guide to improve assessment and intervention skills to prevent domestic homicides. Collaborative research examined how various types of professionals managed domestic violence cases with a high homicide risk. The findings were provided to shelters throughout Quebec for feedback and ideas on how to improve training, resources and broader awareness in this area. This session will present an intervention program aimed at workers in women's shelters. This guide provides workers in these shelters with the tools to face high-risk domestic violence, and to better screen and quickly intervene in situations where homicide of a female partner can be prevented, and to better inform women of the risk factors associated with domestic homicide.

Presenter

Lucie Hénault, Directrice Maison La Source, Sorel-Tracy, PQ

1:00 p.m. – 2:15 p.m.Ballroom 1*Afternoon Plenary:Understanding Domestic Homicide Perpetrators: Engaging Perpetrators in Community Intervention Before the Tragedies

Findings from Domestic Homicide Reviews suggest very few perpetrators sought or received any community intervention prior to the homicide. The findings point to a significant problem in engaging men in treatment before assaults escalate. Although there has been progress in charging policies and court mandated intervention, many perpetrators are still not receiving specialized assessment, intervention or case management approaches. The focus of this panel is on how treatment providers can effectively engage with and manage high-risk perpetrators of domestic violence. Discussion will be around community intervention programs, such as Partner Assault Response (PAR) programs and high-risk management teams, and the effectiveness of these programs in preventing domestic homicide. Ideas will be offered on how to engage with perpetrators of domestic violence and provide them with the appropriate support and intervention without compromising safety and accountability.

Innovations in the BC Response to High Risk DV Cases: The Langley Domestic Violence Project

This workshop will discuss the Langley Domestic Violence Pilot, an innovative program that responds to high-risk domestic violence cases. The Langley Domestic Violence Project is in collaboration with the RCMP and Crown Counsel. The police follow the Domestic Violence Investigation Guide (DVIG) to structure the collection of evidence and manage victim safety. Both the police and prosecutors follow best practices in investigations and prosecution. The processing of these cases is victim-centered and inclusive of a variety of community and criminal justice system partners. High risk cases are investigated by a dedicated Domestic Violence Unit attached to the Serious Crime Section. Preliminary results have demonstrated a significant drop in recanting victims through this supportive approach.

Presenters

Jocelyn Coupal, Crown Prosecutor with the Ministry of the Attorney General, British Columbia

Richard Konarski, Inspector, Operations Support Officer, Langley RCMP Detachment, Langley, BC

Salon D

Preventing Domestic Homicides in Rural Communities

This workshop will discuss research on domestic homicides of women in New Brunswick from 1984 to 2005. By examining a variety of risk factors associated with the NB domestic homicides and contextualizing them within rural life, it is apparent that national domestic homicide risk studies do not always reflect the realities of women living in rural and small town New Brunswick. For example, women experiencing domestic violence and living in rural areas reported significant degrees of firearm victimization. This presentation posits that rurality itself may be a risk factor and it suggests, among other things, ways to mitigate firearms victimization of abused rural women.

Presenter

Deborah Doherty, Executive Director, Public Legal Education and Information Service of New Brunswick, Fredericton, NB

Salon BMissing Pieces: Learning from Perpetrators of Domestic Homicide

A recent review indicated that only one of 35 major intimate partner homicide studies had examined information obtained from interviews with perpetrators. To address this gap in knowledge, we will highlight what we have learned from a study of 37 incarcerated domestic homicide perpetrators from two Canadian penitentiaries, including both comprehensive psychological assessments/assessment interviews and official criminal profile reports. This will include a discussion of our findings on the psychopathic personality and domestic homicide. Our new knowledge obtained from this research will be linked to prevention efforts and clinical practice.

Presenters

Marcus Juodis, Dalhousie University, Halifax, NS

Stephen Porter, Psychology, University of British Columbia – Okanagan, BC

Salon ARisk Assessment and Safety Planning with Battered Immigrant women

Immigrant battered women face the possibility of honour killings, dowry deaths, social shunning and cross-national abduction of their children. This workshop will address risk assessment and safety planning in the context of battered immigrant women and their advocates. The presentation will review the steps for helping women assess their legal and language needs, steps to take to prevent kidnapping and child abduction, and social support in the context of closed communities.

Presenter

Sudha Shetty, Director of the International Fellowship Program, University of Minnesota, St. Paul, MN

TheatreShould We Be Especially Concerned About Male Batterers Who are Highly Resistant to Treatment?

This workshop will examine a research study on male batterers resistant to treatment. The study examined whether a subsample of highly resistant batterers identified with a short self-report screening measure would show greater risk for lethality than other batterers. Overall, the findings suggest that treatment providers should respond with a heightened level of concern to male batterers who are highly resistant to intervention. Consideration should be given screening for resistant during intake into programs for male batterers and for assigning additional resources to intervention with this subpopulation of men.

Lessons Learned from the Ontario Domestic Violence Death Review Committee

The DVDRC is a multi-disciplinary advisory committee of experts that was established in Ontario in 2003 in response to recommendations made from two major inquests into the domestic homicides. The mandate of the committee is to contribute to the reduction in domestic violence generally, and domestic homicides in particular, by reviewing domestic homicide cases, identifying systemic issues of each case, and making recommendations to address these concerns. This workshop will outline the creation and operations of the DVDRC, the major themes in the recommendations around intervention and prevention of domestic homicide, and the future of domestic homicide review.

Presenters

William Lucas, Chair, Ontario Domestic Violence Death Review Committee, Office of the Chief Coroner, Toronto, ON

Myrna Dawson, Canada Research Chair in Public Policy in Criminal Justice, University of Guelph, ON

Backlash Against Feminism: Implications for Domestic Homicide Prevention

Efforts to impose de-gendered representations of violence against women and other forms of violence and abuse have serious implications for scholars and activists who work on violence. Since homicide shows such marked sex differences, this is one area that is obfuscated by the move to de-gendered language. This workshop will discuss why the move to de-gendered language is harmful to prevention efforts and suggestions for truly inclusive research and programming.

Afternoon Workshops C

Criminal Organization and High Risk Offender Unit

This workshop describes the Criminal Organization High Risk Offender Unit (COHROU), an innovative program of Manitoba Justice which manages the risk of the most lethal adults on probation in Winnipeg. The unit targets offenders assessed as the highest risk to reoffend in extreme violence, that have patterns of multiple victims, that use weapons, and have severe victim safety concerns. This program couples risk, need and responsibility with enhanced monitoring, surveillance and expedited arrests for non-compliance. Victim safety planning is an integral component of this multi-system approach.

Presenter

Pauline Jackson, Probation Officer - Criminal Organization High Risk Offender Unit
Manitoba Justice, Winnipeg, MB

Salon C

Supporting, Connecting, Evolving: Ottawa's Response to Intimate Partner Femicide

This workshop describes The Ottawa Coalition to End Violence against Women (OCTE-VAW), a coalition of organizations and individuals dedicated to ending violence against women and, through leadership, education, advocacy and political action, to promoting a coordinated response to women and their children who have experienced abuse. The presentation will consist of a project background, the themes we pulled out from the DVDRC recommendations, and plans for follow-up. This is an innovative initiative that focuses on systemic and cross-sectoral successes and gaps in policies, programs, training and resources that are important to the elimination of domestic homicides of women.

Presenter

Ottawa, ON

Theatre

CAS/VAW Integrated Services Project of Ottawa

This presentation gives voice to a project over ten years in the making between the Children's Aid Society of Ottawa (CASO) and the Violence Against Women (VAW) agencies in Ottawa. The goal of the CAS/VAW Integrated Services Project (ISP) is to effectively increase the security of children by assisting their mothers to be safe. This workshop will illustrate the significance of having a collaborative service delivery which does not undermine the core beliefs and mandates of two very different sectors.

Presenters

Ubah Hersi, (VAW Counselor) Western Ottawa Community Resource Centre

Heather Kendall, (Child Protection Worker) Children's Aid Society of Ottawa

Salon B

The Use of High Risk Case Coordination to Prevent Intimate Partner Femicide: A Liberating or Controlling Experience?

This workshop will discuss research on a high risk case coordination protocol in Nova Scotia. The protocol mandates that police and other service providers use a risk assessment tool to identify woman abuse cases as high risk for lethality. Information on the case is shared among service providers including police, crown, transition houses, men's treatment programs, child welfare and corrections. Support and information is provided to the abused woman and each service provider puts into place safety processes for the abused woman. How abused women perceive the protocol will be discussed.

Presenter

Verona Singer, Coordinator Victim Services Halifax Regional Police, Halifax, NS

Salon D

Experience of Violence and Abuse for Japanese Immigrant Women in Canada

This workshop will present research findings from a qualitative study that examined nine Japanese immigrant women in British Columbia who shared their experiences of being abused and violated by their partners. The results of this research indicated 16 themes in experiencing abuse and violence, such as issues of acculturation, sense of helplessness and powerlessness; feeling and/or being responsible, communication difficulties, sense of shame, experience of racial discrimination and prejudice. This workshop will discuss these themes and the coping strategies of these women. The practical steps of prevention and intervention of immigrant families who are victims of violence and abuse will also be discussed.

Presenter

Yoshiyuki Takano, The University of British Columbia, Vancouver, BC

Ballroom 1

Ontario Bail Safety Project

This workshop will outline the development of the Ontario Bail Safety project, which currently operates in 10 Ontario jurisdictions. The primary focus of the program is to gather information useful in contributing to the safety of victims at the bail stage, and to provide more in depth information to the court regarding risk indicators. The program acknowledges that the victim is the one who holds information about the history of the relationship and its potential lethality. The presentation will outline what information is gathered from the victim and how this information is useful in keeping the victim safe.

Presenters

Ruth Greenspan, Ontario Bail Pilot Program, ON

Norine Nathanson, Counsel- Domestic Violence Lead Criminal Law Policy branch

Salon EDisarming Domestic Violence Project

This session will focus on the links between small arms proliferation and domestic violence together with an overview of selected international/ regional instruments to control small arms proliferation. International advocacy on the issue and what civil society organizations are doing and coalition work will be highlighted. The session is sponsored by Project Ploughshares which has a mandate to engage in research, analysis, dialogue, policy development and public engagement in Canada and internationally on peace and security issues as well as advance understanding of the roots and causes of armed conflict. Project Ploughshares is a founding member of the International Action Network on Small Arms (IANSA), a global movement of some 800 civil society organizations in 120 countries to stop the proliferation and misuse of small arms. The Disarming Domestic Violence Campaign is being launched by IANSA in response to problems raised by members of the women's network of IANSA; the women's network has upwards of 250 member organizations around the world.

Morning Plenary:

Understanding the Risks to Children: From Collaboration to Prevention

This plenary panel will address the impact of domestic violence on children and their principal caregivers in a variety of contexts. Fatality review committees have increasingly pointed to the traumatic and lethal risks that domestic violence poses for children in these families. As information about the impact of domestic violence on children has developed more human services such as education, mental health, social services and justice have had to re-examine existing policies, practices & legislation. Dr. Linda Baker will address our emerging knowledge about effective intervention and prevention strategies for children that recognize the variable and complex circumstances that domestic violence represents. Being aware of unintended consequences of good intentions is critical. Ms. Maureen Reid will focus on the dilemmas for Children's Aid Societies in responding in ways that assist parents and children without re-victimizing or endangering them. Children's Aid Societies have to find the balance between victim empowerment and child safety in crisis situations. Dr. Peter Jaffe will address the challenges in the family justice system in developing parenting plans after separation. He will focus on emerging frameworks in assessing risk and promoting safety and accountability in domestic violence cases before the family court.

Profiling Men Who Kill Their Partners

This workshop will provide an overview of the research about risk factors to domestic homicides and suicides. This will include David Adams' study based on in-depth interviews of men who killed their female partners and victims of attempted homicide. The profiles will include an examination of childhood histories of exposure to domestic violence. He will profile five basic types of killers, each with somewhat distinctive motivations to kill, as well as predisposing factors in their adult relationships. Each style of killer had remarkably consistent grievances and abuse tactics throughout his relationship with the deceased as well as with prior partners. The workshop will discuss how these and other findings about risk factors should inform danger assessment and ongoing risk management strategies.

Presenter

David Adams, Co-Director, Emerge, Cambridge, MA

Salon B

Re-processing Children's Trauma Narratives in Cases of Domestic Homicides

The saturation of violence in children's lives can result in significant sensory overload, damaging children's ability to cognitively process the events to which they have been exposed. Violence is also an assault on the assumptive world of the child, triggering problematic identity and thematic conclusions. This workshop examines research on clinical findings in therapeutic work with over 50 children who have lost a parent as a result of homicide or suicide. This research explores children's narratives for possibilities of resilience and risk reduction for victims of domestic violence, by attending to warning signs that children report in their descriptions of violence occurring in the home.

Domestic Violence Fatality Review Teams: Critical Tensions and Promising Practices

Intimate partner femicide is the single most common form of murder perpetrated against women. Domestic violence fatality review teams have emerged as a means of understanding and preventing future fatalities. Due to their rapid growth, little is known about the nature of these teams or what they accomplish. This workshop will discuss finding from a national study of their efforts, with an emphasis on understanding what critical tensions underlie their efforts to promote systems change that may account for how they are set up and what they achieve. Organizations and systems working with women who experience violence approach culturally competent risk assessment and safety planning with varying levels of readiness. This workshop will explore the need for culturally competent risk assessment tools which weave in life generated risks vs. batterer generated risks. We will look at specific steps organizations/ individuals can take to ensure positive support and assessment processes with abused immigrant women.

Developing DV Fatality Committees in Canada: Emerging initiatives in Manitoba and New Brunswick

This workshop will address the issues that led to consideration of developing a Domestic Violence Death Review committee in Manitoba and New Brunswick. The presentations will outline, the major activities (both governmental and NGO's) which have developed to intervene in domestic violence, the impact of these initiatives on domestic homicides in their jurisdiction, and the circumstances which call for the implementation of a DVDR. Finally, the workshop will present the process and the problems encountered in moving forward to develop such a committee

Preventing Domestic Violence in the Workplace

This workshop will describe a unique 5 year partnership between the Alberta Council of Women's Shelters and the Health Sciences Association of Alberta to develop two research based intervention tools: one to address domestic violence in the workplace; the other to raise men's awareness in the workplace and how they can take a leadership role in prevention. The presentation will describe the issues identified, using, in part, a root causes analysis with local business leaders and progress made to date. By outlining the realities and effects of domestic violence in the workplace, ACWS is building awareness of the issue and the need for a skilful response. The workshop will also examine Ontario legislative and policy reforms since the Lori Dupont Inquest highlight the need for workplace responses to domestic violence as a major health and safety priority. Enhancing Victim Safety through Education and Information – Victim Safety Project

Victim Services Middlesex County in conjunction with Strathroy-Caradoc Police Service has developed an interactive DVD resource to educate and inform people on the various crimes that may be experienced by victims, common trauma reactions, and where victims can go for help in their service area. The resource provides information on how victims may become involved with the justice system, the role of various sectors of the criminal justice system, and how these service providers assist victims of crime as they engage in the criminal justice system. Information is provided about safety planning, risk assessment, and where victims can go for help when high-risk offenders are released into the community. The DVD has been developed for use with all victims but is sensitive to the needs of those who do not have access to computers or the internet. The DVD resource will be highlighted in this workshop with recommendations for use with victims and partners in the criminal justice system as an education tool. The VCARS, SupportLink and Victim Quick Response Programs provided by Victim Services Middlesex County will also be described.

Cultural Competence

Organizations and systems working with women who experience violence approach culturally competent risk assessment and safety planning with varying levels of readiness. This workshop will explore the need for culturally competent risk assessment tools which weave in life generated risks vs. batterer generated risks. We will look at specific steps organizations/individuals can take to ensure positive support and assessment processes with abused immigrant women.

Preventing Homicides Through Public Education: An Interactive Theatre Production of "Missed Opportunities" and a Panel on Reaching out to Neighbours, Friends & Families in Different Cultural Contexts

Findings from Domestic Homicide Review Committees in Ontario and across the US confirm that most homicides appear predictable and preventable based on the number of warning signs and risk factors known by professionals in the community as well as neighbours, friends, family and co-workers. A special interactive theater production was developed to help community members both think about what they can do and how they can practice different interventions depending on their role in the life of the abuse victim and/or perpetrator. The conference participants will have an opportunity to see this production and take the place of one of the bystanders to domestic violence. A panel will discuss the development of educational campaigns across Ontario. The unique needs of aboriginal and francophone communities will be discussed.

Neighbours, Friends and Families Campaign

NFF builds capacity and confidence amongst neighbours, friends, family members and co-workers to recognize woman abuse and respond in empathetic and helpful ways. This presentation will describe how the NFF campaign is building on a community development strategy to create a work-place education strategy to disseminate information about warning signs and risk factors. The work of the campaign is continually evolving and consultative processes are underway to develop a strategies and work plans to implement NFF in communities of people with disabilities and diverse immigrant, settlement, culturally-specific and faith-based communities.

Campagne Voisin-es, ami-es et familles (VAF)

The French Campaign – VAF – was launched one year ago. That year that has taken us through challenging but very enriching experiences. We have explored how and where to find francophone communities in Ontario and come face to face with the reality of how violence against women is perceived and defined at large in the diverse Franco Ontarian communities. Moving on from the challenge of getting communities involved in the campaign, we will share the Francophone experience and outline how we adapted the campaign messages to build awareness and develop strong prevention strategies based on exploring and understanding the fears, concerns and resistance of Francophone communities.

Helping Together through Co-location: It's All About Relationships. The Family Violence Project of Waterloo Region Shares its Experience

Homicide prevention is the goal of the Family Violence Project. Waterloo Region has seen a drastic reduction in the number of domestic homicides since the inception of the project. Initiatives such as a proposed Repeat Domestic Dispute Resolution Strategy, where an investigator and a Victim Services worker attend and offer intervention to residents who have been involved in repeat non-violent domestic disputes to prevent an escalation to violence, are on the horizon. Consistent with the findings of the Domestic Violence Death Review Committee, as 90% of domestic homicides are preventable, early detection and intervention is key and a priority for the Family Violence Project of Waterloo Region. This workshop will outline the Family Violence Project of Waterloo Region.

The Caring Dads Intervention Program for Fathers who have Abused or Neglected their Children or Exposed them to Abuse of their Mothers

There has been recognition in communities of the need for a service such as Caring Dads. Individuals with many years of experience and considerable expertise working with men who are abusive recognize that there are simply no models of intervention for fathers that appropriately address child abuse and exposure of children to the abuse of their mother. The Caring Dads program can be located on a continuum of service that recognizes the importance of providing targeted, specialized services for abusive fathers. This workshop will discuss the Caring Dads program in detail.

Healing Through Giving Voice to Silent Witnesses

Silent Witness is an eloquent and compelling tool to raise public awareness about intimate partner homicide. This workshop will describe the Silent Witness Projects in Alberta, New Brunswick and Ontario, which have given voices to women and children killed by their intimate partners and fathers. Further, the presentation will describe how the project helps surviving family members heal by writing a memorial for their loved ones which is then prominently displayed on a plaque on the front of each of the blood red silhouettes. The Project promotes hope and healing and engages the community in continuing to work to end violence and abuse against women and children.

Substance Abuse and Partner Violence

The Sobering Effect Program

Service providers working with Intimate Partner Violence (IPV) offenders have become increasingly aware that many of these clients also have serious drug/alcohol abuse problems. Approximately half of these men are also referred to substance abuse treatment by probation or have been mandated to become substance free. Clinical experience however indicates that many of these men are not remaining drug-free while undergoing IPV treatment. These men are therefore less likely to benefit from IPV treatment and consequently are more likely to continue with abusive behaviour. The Sobering Effect program is a concurrent IPV and addiction treatment initiative developed by both AADAC and YWCA in an attempt to remedy these concerns. This program is currently undergoing a preliminary evaluation; the results of which will be presented in this workshop.

Salon ESevere Female Perpetrated Intimate Violence & Substance Abuse

Acute intoxication to drugs has been linked to severe intimate partner violence and to domestic homicide. Less is known about other factors accounting for the relationship between intimate partner violence and substance use . Few studies have focussed on female substance abusers who perpetrate IPV. Controversies exist about the context of female IPV and more particularly in its severe forms, but studies indicate that female-to-male violence is not always in self defense. Given the high risk for severe or even fatal violence when one or both partners have been using drugs, information about proximal contexts of severe female-to-male incidents of violence could be valuable to our understanding of domestic homicide. This presentation will share data from a qualitative exploratory study of the perspectives of heterosexual couples on the links between their substance use and incidents of female IPV. Secondary analysis of the narratives from these couples focuses on the descriptions of the circumstances surrounding incidents of severe violence. Clinical implication of these results and recommendation for the safety of both partners will be discussed.
